BUÑUEL: A SURREALIST FILMMAKER

"Buñuel nearly always made Buñuel films."

— Ingmar Bergman

"An iconoclast, moralist, and revolutionary."

— The New York Times

Spanish filmmaker Luis Buñuel was one of the greatest precursors of surrealist cinema, celebrated for his transgressive and boundary-pushing images, from early collaborations with Salvador Dalí on films such as Un Chien Andalou, with its notorious eye slicing scene, to directing Catherine Deneuve in one of her most iconic roles in Belle de Jour.

Taking us deep into his past and evolution as a creator, this comprehensive new documentary provides an unprecedented window into the world and work of an irreplaceable genius whose significant influence can still be felt across the arts.
